

Spring 2018

Welcome to the spring 2018 email newsletter. It's been a great couple of month's; with the highlight being the Red Squirrels United Knowledge Fair. Thank you to everyone who came. It was so inspiring to meet so many people who are passionate about conserving our treasured red squirrels. With a packed agenda, we got stuck into discussions on squirrel pox virus, integrated grey squirrel management and the future of red squirrel conservation. Another highlight was Countryfile visiting Anglesey and covering the red squirrel conservation work by Red Squirrels Trust Wales.

Red Squirrels United Knowledge Fair 2018

More than 100 volunteers and staff from red squirrel conservation organisations across the UK met in Bangor from 24-25 March to learn from one another and celebrate their work. We were even lucky enough to spot a red squirrel during our visit to Treborth Botanic Garden! Visit the Red Squirrels United website to view the agenda and presentations.

International Squirrel Colloquium 2018

On 4-8 June 2018 the 8th International Squirrel Colloquium will be held in Galway, Ireland. This global event takes place every three years and brings together squirrel researchers from around the world. The last three have taken place in Canada, Japan and Finland, so this is a rare opportunity to have the event close to home! Book your place here.

Pine marten research

On 4-8 June 2018 the 8th International Squirrel Colloquium will be held in Galway, Ireland. This global event takes place every three years and brings together squirrel researchers from around the world. The last three have taken place in Canada, Japan and Finland, so this is a rare opportunity to have the event close to home! Book your place here.

Red Squirrels Trust Wales announce new e-book

A new family-friendly book has been published online 'Red Squirrels In My Garden' explains how to feed red squirrels as well as the history of the species and the problems they face. It's great that one of the Red Squirrels United partners has been associated with a lovely new resource. Download your free copy here.

Red Squirrels United is funded by the Heritage Lottery Fund and EU LIFE14 and brings together organisations from across the UK to help protect red squirrels by raising public awareness and engaging community groups.

LIFE14 NAT/UK/000467

For regular updates follow our social media channels:

